When learning works at its best and the conditions are right, it is also always an act of empowerment. Together with the representatives from the NGO “Chancen gestalten / Shaping opportunities” and Magdalini Bakali from the Greek program STIMULI and the European Network of Active Civil Society for Education and Diversity we will discuss why empowerment is crucial for the learning experience of third-country nationals.

With their impulses we want to understand what empowerment means in the context of integration on a local level. How it can become an essential part of the learning process. Based on the impulses of the creative learning projects of “Chancen gestalten / Shaping opportunities” and STIMULI we want to discuss together with you how learning can be thought of as an act of empowerment and how cities can contribute to this experience.
