Employment is an important element of one's own livelihood and crucial for social participation. But for refugees and migrants there is no "one way" to achieve this. Ebere Akadiri is a Founder, Entrepreneur, Educator and President of Rise and Lead Women, she knows the crucial role that employment has in the lives of migrants. Fuad Mahamad is CEO at ACH in order to support the resettlement of refugees like himself, he has built the organization into one of the leading providers of integration support for excluded and marginalized people. Ana Maria Alvarez Monge is the Founder of Migrapreneur. Migrapreneur stands on the ideal to bridge the gaps and lack of information that prevent migrants from thriving or being treated as regular entrepreneurs. They match providers, business experts, and a comprehensive list of business solutions that every entrepreneur needs.

Together with these three inspiring guests we want to discuss the importance of individual ways of employment. Employment biographies are as individual as people themselves, also or even more so for people with a refugee or migration background. We want to use this session to take the time to understand and discuss refugees' aspirations for their employment biographies, rather than projecting our preconceptions onto them.
