Different levels of political decision-making structures – both horizontal and vertical – come together, especially at the local level. But what does multi-level governance mean, especially at the local level? What is the significance of citizen participation formats in this context and how can they be used to integrate them into urban society? In this webinar we want to explore these questions and get to know different citizen participation formats.

For this session we have invited two guests who will share their insights on the topic: Ahmad Wali Ahmad Yar is a migration researcher from the University of Brussels and will show the importance of citizen participation. Representing the municipality of Wrocław, Jan Wais will present the cities' actions and good practices towards supporting citizen participation formats.
